Re: United States v. Abdel-Wadood, 19 Cr. 233

Dear Judge Kaplan:

When bail was first set for Mr. Abdel-Wadood, we advised the Court that he would be residing in a studio apartment in Manhattan and that we had provided the address to the government and Pretrial Services. See letter of 4/26/19. We also noted that the plan was for Mr. Abdel-Wadood's wife and children to join him here for the summer, at which point they would seek a larger apartment, and we would ask the Court to modify this condition accordingly. Mr. Abdel-Wadood has now located a two-bedroom apartment in Manhattan, where he intends to live with his family this summer and remain after they leave. (His hope is that they will return to New York during school vacations.) Once again the government and Pretrial Services have been provided the address, and both have no objection. There seems to be no formal action required of the Court (there is no condition to modify), but we thought it appropriate to inform the Court of the proposed change.

Respectfully submitted,
